

BRITTA KRAAKEVIK

Britta Kraakevik is a sought after artist making a name for herself in the Denver, Colorado area. A Singer/Songwriter major and Business Music minor at University of Colorado Denver, Britta also gigs, busks, sings the National Anthem at different events, and leads worship at area churches.

She has opened for Hazel Miller and the Collective at Lakewood's Sounds Exciting! summer series. She also wrote and dedicated an original song — To The Fullest — for her high school class graduation ceremony, which she played on the Red Rocks Amphitheater stage.

Britta has performed on stages in both the US and Europe with various choirs and in musical theater. Most recently she played the lead in Legally Blonde in a local theater group.

SONGWRITING

Britta started writing songs at the age of nine and got more serious at twelve when her grandpa gave her her first guitar. Backed by her soaring, genuine vocals, her original songs reflect the hope we all have of understanding relationships, of living the best life we can, and of finding a happily ever after. Each song has a unique story, and we find her words uncannily relate to our lives as well.

PROJECTS

Britta worked on her first EP, no more, with producers: Larry Cancia, Trevor Hustor, & Patrick Warren. Her next release, gone, produced at Denver's Colorado Sound by Steve Avedis, won UC Denver's singer/songwriter contest in 2020. Both no more and gone are on iTunes, Amazon, Apple Music, and Spotify.

PERSONAL LIFE

Britta likes to hang out with friends, shop, watch movies, make TikTok's, and play with her adopted rescue dog, Soso. Like a true artist though, she's happiest when she's creating songs with her guitar, piano, or ukulele, and she looks for every chance to share her music with others.
